

The telephony privacy act is probably the one piece of state legislation that has most affected my life in a positive manner. Unwanted telemarketing calls, particularly the ones where the caller has moved on the the next call before I can answer, are immensely annoying. Any communications between me and any services providers can be accomplished more effectively, and less intrusively, in writing. Please, please, do not weaken this law.